Interesting Figures Result From Contest Of Egg Laying Hens

(Special to Daily Maui News)

HONOLULU, Dec. 27.—Leaders in the egg laying contest at the end of the eighth week are as follows:

Young Ting's white leghorns, Wailuku, Maui, 172.

Mary M. Silva, white leghorns, Honolulu, 167.

J. M. Silva, Anconas, Honolulu, 164.

L. K. Smith, Makawao, Maui, 157.

L. K. Smith, white leghorns, Makawao, 158.

Mrs. C. M. Cooke, Honolulu, white leghorns, 155.

Fisher Poultry Farm, white leghorns, 159.

Mrs. J. S. Donagho, white leghorns, Honolulu, 159.

Mrs. Wilcox pen of Rhode Island Reds was the biggest producer last week, 27 eggs and the L. K. Smith and H. L. Chung pens were next with 26.

A slight decrease, amounting to 2.5 per cent, under last week's score is to be recorded in this, the eighth week of the contest, the total eggs laid by all pens being 319 eggs as against 327 eggs laid during the previous week.

However, the flock average still exceeds 30 percent of the theoretical possible lay which may be considered very satisfactory, all things considered.

Total feed consumed by the 75 pullets constituting the 15 competing units during the 4 weeks period ending December 26, 1922, in comparison with the feed consumed during the previous four weeks period.

1st 4 weeks 2nd 4 weeks

Scratch feed 290 1/2 295

Dry mash 201 1/4 196 1/2

Wet mash 113 1/4 113 1/4

Skim milk 288 3/4 288 3/4

Green feed 525 525

Onions 23 1/2 28 1/2

The amounts consumed for wet mash, skim milk and green feed are necessarily constant because hand fed in limited and uniform quantities. The striking contrasts is in the relative amounts of scratch feed and dry mash that was consumed. It is very evident that most of the fowls would consume a greater amount of the grain feed than of the dry mash were not each pen limited to the definite amount of 5 pounds per week. With few exceptions, the grain hoppers are emptied before the end of the 7 days period, when no further grain is supplied. We are strongly of the opinion that were unlimited grain fed, the egg production would be limited. This theory is to be tested in a separate feeding experiment together with other mooted questions beginning with the new year. It is interesting to note that there is also fully a hundred per cent difference in the amount of water consumed by the different pens. At the close of the first quarter of the contest, a full record of all feeds consumed will be presented with a careful analysis of its significance.

New Italian Premier Student Of Language

ROME. (By Associated Press Mail)

Benito Mussolini, the youthful legal dictator of Italy, is an accomplished linguist. Besides his mother tongue, Italian, he possesses, in the order named, knowledge of French, German and English.

He learned French at an early age and he speaks it without the slightest accent. For some years before the war he was a professor of French literature in the University of Milan.

While an editor on a newspaper published in Trento and owned by Cesare Batisti, the Italian patriot executed by the Austrians during the war, he studied German, and while his pronunciation is not on a par with his French, he has a profound knowledge of Goethe's tongue.

Seriously wounded during the war he remained two months in a hospital. There, during his convalescence, he took up the study of English.

"I hardly think I could qualify to make a speech in the American Congress," he said to a friend recently "but," he added with a touch of pride, "I read the English newspapers myself."
